Anti-Racism Training

Mindful Interference
Relational Strategy Consultations
OUR MISSION
Project Say Something and Mindful Interference are Alabama-based non-profits that demand equity and justice for all Black people. Our goal is to promote racial justice and create spaces that center Black activism. We challenge political institutions to denounce anti-black racism by advocating for policy that removes shrines to white supremacy and reduces harm to marginalized people, and strengthening cross-racial coalitions and empowering our communities to stand in solidarity.

THE IMPORTANCE OF ANTI-RACISM TRAINING
The purpose of this training program is to form more cohesive grassroots coalitions, the accessibility of education resources, and ultimately the reconciliation of the past with the present in order to envision a more equitable future. By teaching anti-racism we wish to promote racial justice and accountability while discouraging performative allyship and other problematic behaviors. By recognizing these issues we hope to strengthen solidarity among white allies and center the issues that affect the Black community.
